TEAGHERS'GOLUMN.

We are grateful to our friend, Prof. J. vitation to visit the Crafts School, of which he is principal. He promises to show us around among all the free schools of Charleston. That would be delightful, and we think we could make a visit to the graded schools of Columbia and the public schools of Charleston profitable not only to ourself but to the Avery Finger, of Charleston, for an inpublic schools of Anderson County. A School Commissioner can not see too much of such things-he cannot be too well posted about every thing pertaining to his line of business—but here comes the rub, and here the difficulty: School Commissioners have to "shave close to wake and many and the laws of health, and that schools should be conducted on hygienic principles. There would be several disadvantages connected with having the Normal in Charleston. What up-country teacher wants to spend the month of August in Charleston? Teachers must improve their methods of teaching. The people are demanding better results. They are beginning to look with more favor upon "new-fangled ways." The progressive teachers are securing the best positions. Old fogies may oppose the new education, and try to make teachers slide along in the old rats, but their power is waning. The teacher who is content to keep pupils quiet and ask questions from the textbook, must wake up or leave the profession. The teacher should be the living soul of the school, to understand the product the wild, in the school to understand the product the wild, in the school to understand the product the wild, in the school to understand the product the wild, in the school to understand the product the wild, in the school to understand the school the wild, in the school the wild, in the school to understand the school the school the school to understand the school to understand the needs of the child-mind, to stimulate and direct the energies of the child, and to draw out its faculties in such a manner, that it may be educated, developed, in accordance with nature's plans. Is the child strengthened by to-day's lesson? Have I followed educational principles? Am I supplying the child's needs? These questions should be ever in the teacher's mind. If these questions can be intelligently answered in the affirmative, the teacher is a success; if not, he needs to continue the study of education. -Iowa Teacher.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION

Mr. Thomas Hardeman, of Georgia, has given much time and investigation to one branch of the educational proband has succeeded in collecting much interesting information. In his view, the defect in the public school system is the neglect of instruction and training for useful occupation. Mr. Hardeman is not an enemy of the public school system, and his array of statistics and opinions is intended to display its defects, and not as an impeachment of the system as a whole. He advocates industrial or mechanical tuition in the industrial or mechanical tuition in the public schools, so that by practical hand-iwork pupils of every condition may be taught the secrets of handicraft, and obtain some knowledge of engineering, physica and the practical arts.

England has 800 trade schools with thirty-five thousand pupils. In France there are trade schools, in eighty cities, with thirty thousand pupils, besides two hundred smaller technical schools.—
Prussia has two hundred schools, and Bayaria one hundred and fifty. In the Bavaria one hundred and fifty. In the United States there were only seventy-five trade schools in 1876 with about seven thousand, five hundred pupils. There is evidently a great room for de-velopment, therefore, in the direction pointed out by Mr. Hardeman, but it is always questionable how far it is proper or necessary that the free schools should give more than a strictly elementary education. A Death-Trap in Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Early this morning two houses, Nos. 55 and 57 Atlantic street, Brooklyn, fell in with a crash and that such a thing was actually in exist-ence in their midst? Why would they? the reported killed and others ence in their midst? Why would they?
It's nothing new for them. They have operas, lectures and entertainments of so many kinds there that the exercises of the Normal School would attract very little if any attention. Our opinion is that much more can be accomplished by holding the School in a smaller townone just about the size of Anderson.

sons are reported killed and others seriously injured. The Abbott buildings on State street, which are let out with steam power for various manufacturing purposes, together with an extensive building in the rear, were destroyed. The rear buildings was undergoing repairs and one of the props under the girders gave away, when the entire structure collapsed. The fire then communicated with the front buildings and, despite the efforts of the firemen, they were destroyed. Fifteen workmen are supposed to be ed. Fifteen workmen are supposed to be in the rains.

The building destroyed was very large and consisted of a main building, fronting on Columbia street, with two wings, leaving a court in the centre. The establishment covered two thirds of a block. It was occupied by about twenty manufacturing concerns, who rented steam power with their rooms and employed an aggregate of 500 persons, the majority girls and women, and the greater part of them were at work when the accident occurred. The cause of the fire was the overturning of the boilers of a soap factory on the second floor.

The west wall of the middle wing on Atlantic street had settled. Workmen were screwing it up with jacks when it fell with a crash. The building was twenty-seven years old and full of inflammable material, and it was a mass of lames in a few minutes. The heat was so fierce that the water was turned to steam and the firemen made no impression upon the fire. They occupied them-selves with life saving and rescued many women from the upper stories with their ladders. The loss of life was greatly inamong the inmates of the building. Many women jumped from the upper before the flames reached them and without waiting for the firemen's ladders, which were even then being raised to them. Some were seen to jump from the windows into the burning de-A number of men were at work upon the wall which collapsed and none of these has since been seen. Ten working girls have not been accounted for. The janitor of the building was killed within its walls after he had given the alarm and returned to help save life. The fire chief expresses the opinion that twenty five or more persons are under the wreck, all dead. Three bodies have been taken from the ruins. They were builted beyond recognition. The building was owned by Nathan Cushing, of Boston. The loss is estimated at $300,000. Insurance unknown.

Later accounts from the Brooklyn dis aster report only three bodies recovered and a dozen persons unaccounted for.

He Killed his Father.

On the 22d of September, 1880, a fai mer of Springdale, Lalayette County, Miss., was waylaid and shot through the side. He managed to reach home and lived about three days. In his ante morare i dvocated ought not to be made an his son, Isaac Newton Goodwin. Goodwin was arrested for mur-der, but in the face of this evidence was CURIOUS for strange, unusual, &c.—
"Curious" is equivalent to inquisitive, and ought to be kept to that meaning. It is very fashionable of late, however, to use it in the sense of provoking inquiry, or worthy to be inquired into. "A curious child finds a curious iflower, and makes a curious remark about it." It is a pity to use a word three times in a pity to use a word three times in a summed name of Milton E. Goodwin. Last October he marsied Miss Emma Ezell (a niece of Mr. A. C. Ezell,) who expects the contract of the short sentence, in three different senses.

DESCRIPTION for kind, sort, &c.—A description is a setting forth of the peculiar qualities of an object, so that the object may be recognized thereby. This is a very different thing from sort, or kind, or class; and yet we sometimes hear of persons or things of every description, when the speaker clearly meant to speak of persons or things of every description, when the speaker clearly meant to speak of persons or things of every class.

Example for problem.—An example in Arithmetic contains the solution of a problem, as a model for the pupil's guidance. A problem contains work to be years of age, with dark hair and compjexion, and an unprepossessing countenance. The chain of evidence against him is a strong one, but he never-theless confidently asserts that he will be able to establish his innocence. He will be taken to Oxford, Miss., as soon as the necessary requisition papers arrive, and will be tried at the Court of Sessions,

The early anti-Cavery sentiment in Virginia is well-known. The planters of the upper Districts of South Carolina, held a convention in 1816 to devise measures for putling an end to the slave trade and for the abolition of slavery. The preamble and resolutious passed by this convention were as emphatic as any over alopted by a Northern abolition convention.

Those who complain of rainy weather do not realize that not only does the earth need washing, but also the air which we breathe so many times a day. The effect of rain upon the air and the contents of the rain have been made a subject of examination by the meteorolo-gical council of London during the past two years. Three stations were used for collecting the rainfall-one at St. Bartholomew's hospital, another at Upper Hamilton Terrace, in the Northwest por-tion of London, and a third at Hackney. It was found the rain contained twice as much impurity as that which fell at the suburban stations, and the impurities gathered at all the stations were in the ame proportion.

The chief impurities were found to be sulphates and chloride, and it was discovered that the rain caught at St. Bartholomew's was always contaminated with soct and disagreeable to the taste. The sunmer rain is more impure than that of winter, and in the mixture of London rain and soot a trace of arsenic is found. In summer the rain was shown to contain a larger quantity of sulphates than chlo-rides, which was supposed to be owing to the decomposition of animal and vegetable matter during the warm months After the rain has been falling for some time the impurities are found to diminish, and the satisfaction with which we breathe in the washed air after a good rainfall is an evidence that our senses

HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises. The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction. The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like these of alcoholic prepara-tions, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.
